Poison Center Update -- 4000 Calls

In the five months since it opened, the UCSF-sponsored Bay Area Regional Poison Center has received more than 4,000 phone calls. Located in the Emergency Service at San Francisco General Hospital Medical Center, the Poison Center provides 24-hour-a-day advice, information, and emergency consultation to callers in the Bay Area and North Coast counties.

Sixty-nine percent of the calls received have involved poisoning; 31% were for information only. Of the poisoning calls, 99.3% were acute in circumstance, 77% accidental, and 53.5% involved a child younger than five years of age.

Sixty-five percent of all calls were from consumers and the lay public. Among the other callers were physicians and nurses, including persons staffing hospital emergency rooms throughout Northern California.

Staff members of the Center are available for educational presentations to professional and community groups, and classrooms, especially for pre-school-age children. For further information call 666-2845.

Kelly P. Hales, 4th-year Pharmacy student, instructs preschoolers at Forest Hill Community Church Nursery School for the UCSF-sponsored Bay Area Regional Poison Center.

Free Classes for Arthritis Patients

Free classes for rheumatoid arthritis patients and their families are now being offered by the Rosalind Russell Medical Research Center for Arthritis at UCSF. Medical aspects, psychological and sexual adjustments, and community resources are discussed in small groups. Dozens of tips are offered on less stressful ways of performing day-to-day activities like writing, cooking, and unlocking doors.

The impact of this lifelong disease on a person's activities and self-image is difficult for others to comprehend. In the classes, patients are told how to spot and avoid the quacks that thrive on the hopes of those with this incurable disease. Ephraim P. Engleman, director of the Center, says that he eventually hopes to expand the education program to include persons with other types of arthritis, but current classes are for those with rheumatoid arthritis.

Glenda Dickinson, rheumatology nurse specialist responsible for the implementation and evaluation of the program, and a rheumatoid arthritic herself, says that a peaceful coexistence with arthritis requires a total reevaluation of your life style.

The National Institute for Arthritis, Metabolism, and Digestive Diseases covers the cost of the education program through a grant to UCSF, enabling the University to offer the classes to the community without charge. To find out more about the patient education classes, call 666-1192.

New Rape Prevention Program

A Rape Prevention Education Program will start on campus in September. The new program seeks to diminish the number of incidents of sexual assaults and to help lessen the trauma when they do happen.

Outreach discussion groups are planned, and information regarding vulnerability to, prevention of, and resistance to rape will be provided. All nine campuses of the UC system will be starting similar rape prevention programs.

Sponsored by the UCSF Campus Police Department, the program is funded by the California Council on Criminal Justice and the Federal Law Enforcement Assistance Act. For further information call 666-1414.

The campus already has a Rape Treatment Center, offering counseling to women who have been raped. The Center is open 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Anyone who has been raped, or knows of a friend who has been, should contact the Center at 681-8080 or go directly to Center facilities at 401 Parnassus Ave.

Milliberry Union Children's Programs

Registration is now in progress for children's summer activities, including swimming for infants, tiny tots and children, ballet, gymnastics and trampoline. For information call 666-1800.

Pulmonary Disease Studied

UCSF is one of five North American centers selected to participate in a study that will evaluate specific forms of treatment for chronic bronchitis, emphysema, and some forms of asthma. At least 1.4 million Californians suffer from these conditions, which are known collectively as chronic obstructive pulmonary disease.

Dr. Philip C. Hopewell, assistant professor of Medicine, heads the study, which has its headquarters at San Francisco General Hospital Medical Center. The goal of the project is to determine if machines that assist breathing, called positive pressure breathing devices, offer any advantages over conventional therapy.

Persons interested in finding out if they are eligible for the study should contact Dr. Hopewell or Joan Turner, R.N., at 821-8313. No patient will be enrolled in the study without the approval of his/her physician.

Dentistry Gift

Hundreds of children born with malformations of the face or jaws will be helped to lead normal lives through the most recent gift of the Native Sons of the Golden West Charitable Foundation made to the School of Dentistry Center for Craniofacial Anomalies. The $12,500 contribution brings to $82,500 the amount of support received for this program from the Native Sons for the years 1977-79.

Since 1953, when the organization adopted the Center as its primary statewide charitable project, gifts have totaled nearly $400,000. The recent check was presented to Ben Pavone, dean, School of Dentistry, and Egil P. Harvold, director, Center for Craniofacial Anomalies, by Charles E. Kolbert, Jr., President of the Native Sons; Louis E. Pellandini, past President and Secretary; and Ivo Monti, chairman of the Board of the Native Sons.

More than 700 Students Receive Degrees

Seven hundred and five students received degrees recently from the UCSF Schools of Dentistry, Nursing, Pharmacy, and Medicine, including Langley Porter Institute and the Graduate Division.

At the five ceremonies 155 doctors, 279 nurses, 103 pharmacists, 85 dentists, 22 dental hygienists, and 32 psychiatrists and psychologists were graduated. Seven others received Ph.D. degrees in the basic and social sciences and 22 took advanced degrees in Pharmacy and Nursing.

Alan L. Perry-Whippy of Sausalito was awarded the School of Medicine's prestigious Gold-Headed Cane Award. Jeffrey J. Anderson and Donna A. Ferriero, both of San Francisco, were also inducted into the Gold-Headed Cane Society.

The highest award of the School of Pharmacy, the Bowl of Hygeia, went to Donald E. Schneider of Oakland. Jeannette Ong of Oakland and Kelly P. Hales of Dos Palos were cited for honorable mention.

Awards went to 28 dental students, including multiple-award winners Scott A. Lambert of Castro Valley, Lee N. Wiggins of Sacramento, Ralph D. Hawkins of Palos Verdes, and John L. Burkman of San Francisco.

Four psychiatric residents from Langley Porter Institute received special awards: Stephen D. Purcell, William A. Dickman, Jeffrey R. Weiner, and Thomas R. Insel, all of San Francisco.

UCSF has 445 students in the School of Dentistry, 1,979 in the School of Medicine, 606 in the School of Nursing, and 488 in the School of Pharmacy.
